SMALL CROWD AT GUN CLUB CONTEST

As most of the members of the El Paso Gun club are taking advantage of the early fall shooting, the attendance at the range Sunday was very poor. A hard wind blowing across the range kept the score low. Geo. Corning was again high man in the W. E. Orr event while Billy Leighton captured the Three Rapid Fire event for the day.

Scores were as follows:

Baseball Above Reproach--Mack Baseball Develops Mind--McGraw

Two Great Baseball Leaders Give Their Views Before a Religious Meeting in New York--Everything Is Ready For the World's Series--Final Games Are Necessary to Decide the Standings of Some of the Clubs in Both Leagues.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—"Baseball is a manly sport that brings to the surface the natural skill and prowess of an individual to a greater extent than any other game ever devised; second, as conducted under organized lines, it is absolutely above reproach. Baseball never can lose its popularity, never die as long as the American public retains its confidence in the men who conduct it. Organization on the lines which have brought it to such a high standard are absolutely necessary to maintain its integrity and popularity. May it ever remain our national sport, safeguarded by men of high principles."—Connie Mack.

"Baseball develops the mind, establishes discipline and gives to those who take part in it sound bodies, clear heads and a better sense of life. For almost all of my life I have been a participant and student of the American national sport and I know that everything in connection with it is for the betterment of those who participate in it."—John J. McGraw.

These expressions from two great leaders in the national game were read last night at Grace Methodist Episcopal church, at a "baseball service" conducted by the pastor, one of the most unique ever held in a New York church. Many prominent baseball men were present.

Ready For Series.
The service only served to demonstrate the very wide interest in the great world's series, which opens tomorrow.

Reserved Seats All Gone.
This, the day before the opening of the world series baseball games in New York, found the vanguard of fans pouring into the city on every train.

Baseball writers from far and near trooped into the city for the annual meeting this afternoon. There was the usual talk that speculators had secured a choice allotment of reserved seats. The casual fan who arrived today found all the 8000 reserved seats disposed of and nothing left for him to do but get in line at the Polo grounds early tomorrow morning when the 30,000 unreserved seats are to be thrown open.

It was said that it was doubtful whether Snodgrass, the Giants' center fielder, who is suffering with a "Charley Horse," would be able to take part in the series. Doyle's injured shoulder is in good shape and he will be in the opening game. If Snodgrass does not play, it is probable that Shafer will be in his place in the field and Herzog will go to third base.

As to Baseball Writers.
No baseball player or manager may write for the newspapers after the present world's series, but those with contracts with newspapers, signed prior to September 27, may go ahead with their writing this year. This was the decision reached by the national baseball commission this afternoon.

August Herrmann, chairman of the National commission, Thomas J. Lynch, president of the National league, and Ban B. Johnson, president of the American league, the third member of the governing body, are here for the world's series. The commission will meet today to give its instructions to the umpires and decide on any further questions regarding the playing of the games.

Distributing Tickets.
Distribution of the 8000 odd reserved seat tickets at the New York grounds is under way. The greater part of these tickets have gone to baseball men throughout the country and to New York club patrons of long standing. Some 30,000 seats in the lower stand and bleachers will be available to the public at the grounds for each game of the series. The seating arrangements are believed by the magnates to be such as to eliminate chances of speculation so far as possible.

There seems no doubt that all the regulars of the Athletics will be ready to take the field and play the game without physical handicap. While it appears to be settled that Larry Doyle, the hustling second baseman of the New Yorks, will be in shape to take his position at the beginning of play on Tuesday, the impression prevails that McGraw will be without the services of Fred Snodgrass, the team's regular center-fielder, when the series opens. Doyle, with the exception of a little stiffness in his throwing arm, appears to have recovered well from the effects of his recent automobile spill. Snodgrass's "Charley horse," however, still is bothering him so much that it is out of the question to expect him to play up to his usual form.

The Giants' Lineup.
It looks to be probable, therefore, that the Giants will line up Tuesday with Merkle, Doyle, Fletcher and Herzog filling the infield positions, and with Burns, Shafer and Murray in the outfield. Some close watchers of the play of the team are inclined to take the view that the team as thus formed will not be a bit weaker than a lineup including Snodgrass.

The Giants will have a workout today on the Polo grounds in an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Nationals. The regulars will be given a chance to limber up and most of them probably will play through the game.

Mathewson and Marquard are likely to be two pitchers tried out for an inning or two, as between them apparently lies the choice of a box man to oppose the twirler Connie Mack may select to open the series.

Field games in which players of each team will participate will afford a further opportunity of limbering up. An unique preliminary to the series was a "baseball service" held at the Grace Methodist Episcopal church last night. Many baseball men were present and letters were read from John J. McGraw and Connie Mack. The latter telling "why baseball is worthy of support," praised the game for its honesty and other characteristics.

Final Standings Settled.
While the pennant races in both leagues were settled nearly two weeks ago, several interesting contests for place have been going on among clubs in each organization. In the National league, Philadelphia's title to second place was not seriously questioned. Chicago threatened at one time but the Phillies, despite a bad week at the end, won enough games to hold themselves safe. Chicago finished in third place with a good margin over Pittsburgh in fourth place. The Cubs, under Evers, made a better showing than many critics expected and their aggressive player-manager has good material for next year. Generally picked to be up among the dangerous contenders, the Pirates got off to a bad start and at no time were a potent factor in the race. Fred Clarke is not likely to rest satisfied with the team, as it is said some changes may be expected by the time another year begins.

The Boston under George Stallings, finished fifth, heading the second division. To take a tail-end club and bring it up to this notch in one year was no small achievement and the Braves give promise of making further progress in 1914.

Brooklyn finished sixth, a notch above last year, losing a final-week chance to beat out Boston. Cincinnati, with Joe Tinker at the helm, had to be satisfied with seventh position.
Poor Start For Reds.
The Reds' start, like Pittsburgh's, was a poor one, though they played far better ball later in the season. St. Louis, which lost by nearly 100 points, never got going well at all, and played worse instead of better as the season progressed. Miller Huggins, it would seem, is likely to have a hard time making his team a factor in next year's race, unless, as has been hinted, there will be wholesale changes in the team's personnel.

The Athletics this year got an early lead in the American league race and the race was an easy one for them.
Cleveland, the runner-up for the greater part of the year, lost its grip in the season's later weeks while Charlie Griffith's Washingtons were bracing and making a strong showing. Griffith's ambitions to land a flag never were nearer realization. There will be few to criticize the showing he has made with his team. There seemed to be something lacking at critical times with the Clevelanders, which took third place, as the final standing is computed.

Fourth Place For Sox.
It took the last week of play to decide the fourth place contest, but the Red Sox finally won by a slight margin. Misfortune hit the last year champions hard in the early months and their fall from their high estate of 1912 was one of the season's remarkable developments. The White Sox, although they acquired Russell, were without the services of Ed Walsh, their former pitching mainstay, for the greater part of the season and finished in fifth place, though with a percentage well above half way mark.
Detroit, ending in sixth place, was largely by virtue of weakness in the seventh place fight was not until the last moments of the season. Cleveland Sunday, when Cleveland taking the last half of a double with the Browns in the cellar.

The New Yorks occupy the second position by a four-point margin. Chance early saw he could do little with the material left him and started to build up a new team. His club, lucky to win a game a week on the average at the start, was playing considerably better than .500 ball in the last month of the season.
The St. Louis Browns, although last, have played well recently, and with the fine pitching staff they have, bid fair to do better next year.

WAIT ALL NIGHT TO GET TICKETS
Women, Men and Boys Scramble to Be First in Line to Buy for the World's Series Games.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 6.—Men, women and boys lined up all last night in front of the department store where the advance sale of tickets for the world's series games to be played here opened at 9 o'clock this morning. First in the line were two messenger boys who took their positions early Sunday afternoon. Shortly after the boys started the line, a negro man arrived with a big rocking chair, in which he made himself comfortable. The first woman to take her place with the would-be ticket purchasers arrived about 8 o'clock.

The American league tickets will have their final practice here today and will leave at 8 o'clock tonight for New York.
It is believed that Bender will be chosen to oppose Mathewson in the opening game while Schank is expected to be the receiving end. Plank and Lapp, however, may be the battery in case manager McGraw should decide to send Marquard to the mound.

Marquard and Plank in the Contest

World's series records of Marquard and Plank—

1911 1 1 .500

1911 0 1 .000
1912 2 0 1.000
Marquard did not pitch a full game in the series, although he took part in three games. He pitched the first seven innings of the second game, the first three of the fifth game and relieved White in the seventh inning of the last game, which the Athletics won, 12-2.

BATTLE of star southpaw pitchers is always a big thing in a world's series. Therefore the eyes of the baseball world will be on the veteran Plank and the brilliant Marquard when they toe the rubber in the big world's event.

It would not surprise fandom to see these two men of portside persuasion come together in the same game or games. If they do and both are right the thousands of spectators will witness a pitching duel worth going miles to see.
Both are the star left hand pitchers of their respective leagues. Plank is still a very young man, and if there is any truth in the old theory about youth being served, Marquard should have the advantage in that respect.
But whatever advantage Marquard's youth may give him in a short series of seven games, Plank's greater experience makes up for it. Plank also has a style of delivery quite unlike that to which the Giants are used to in his "crossfire."

The "crossfire," as pitched by Plank, is one of the most puzzling deliveries in vogue. Plank also has marvelous control and is a master hand at placing the ball where it is almost impossible to hit it safe.
Marquard is also the possessor of good control, and his work in the world's series of last year, when he was the most dependable pitcher on the Giants' staff, makes his stand forth as a strong contender this year. Plank pitched and lost two games in the world's series of 1905. He did not get into action in the struggle with the Cubs in 1910, due mainly to the good work of Coombs and Bender, the former winning all of his three games. In 1911, against the Giants, he was credited with one victory and one defeat. He started and finished the game that was credited to him on the right side of the ledger, but pitched only one inning in the game that went against him. In the fifth game, Jack Coombs injured his groin and the Giants tied the score on him in the ninth inning. Plank pitched the tenth and New York scored on him, winning the game.

Marquard, picked as the hope of the Giants before the world's series in 1911, proved a dismal failure. He pitched in parts of three games, starting two and finishing one. He was officially credited with none won and one lost. In 1912, when not so much was expected of him, he came to the rescue of his team when the Red Sox had them down on the ground and shouting for success, and won the two games that he pitched.

Players Only Know Who Will Win Series; They Disagree

(By Damon Runyon.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—After all comparisons have been made, the only writers who positively know which team will win in the coming disorder are the ball players, and they do not agree, which makes it all the more confusing. J. Torts Meyers and Richard W. Marquard, Sr., for instance, intimate that the New York Giants will be the victors, whereas Edward Collins and J. Franklin Baker allege that the Philadelphia Athletics have what the slang whangers call a lead pipe skinnock.

Personally, we might be inclined to string with Meyers and Marquard, but you never can tell.

That's the whole trouble. You never can tell. Not for world's world's Meyers and Marquard or Baker and Collins mislead the reading public, but there is always grave danger of them misleading themselves. You never can tell.

Not Much in Figures.
We have tried to solve the problem by means of figures. We have taken a lot of ones and twos and threes and showed them around this way and that, like anybody, and mixed 'em up with decimals and fractions and adjectives and such, but they always came out looking just like ones and twos and threes. There are some people who can take the same figures and make them lie down, roll over and speak, which proves that it is not the figures so much as the handling of the figures.

The Athletics, on paper, are stronger in some respects than the Giants, and the Giants are stronger on paper, in other respects than the Athletics—it depends entirely on the paper. The Athletics will win, or Connie Mack is mistaken, and the Giants will win, or John J. McGraw has not been correctly informed.

There you have the situation in a nutshell, with the accent on the nu-

The Cactus Bowling league, of the 1912-13, will roll its initial season Wednesday night at Cactus alley. Four teams will be entered, comprising the Anheuser-Busch, Tattle and Scott White teams. The clubs were originally intended of the Andrews team, but the team name was withdrawn. Manager Art Wood then jumped the bowlers up and divided them equally between the four teams, according to their individual averages last season.

The schedule of the Industrial minor league begins on October 15, and it is probable that at least six five-men teams will be entered.
Manager Art Wood, of the Cactus team, will leave Monday night for Albuquerque, where he will witness the baseball tournament at the fair.

FINAL GAMES IN THE WESTERN LEAGUE DO NOT CHANGE RESULT
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 6.—The final games of the Western league season played here made no difference in the standing of the clubs. Though St. Joseph, before winning its first game from Omaha stood in danger of being tied for third place with Lincoln.
